- This is not a timed event, not a convoy, but a social run out.
- You are responsible for your own driving standards and should drive in a manner that falls within the law and your own capabilities.
- Take care, stay safe and enjoy.
- Obey the rules of the road.
- Do not try to keep up with the car ahead.
- Allow time for the driver of any car following to see which direction you are taking.
- Take heed of any notices of caution contained within the route instructions.
- If at the front of a group or setting the pace, then bear in mind the 'whip effect' - even if you are doing a legal speed at the front, cars behind may need to do considerably more to catch up the tail of the group if they have been briefly delayed at roundabouts etc.
- Signal early for turnings - 'pass the signal back'
- Watch out for the car behind you. Make sure the person following you sees you make the turn.
- Favour the left (slow) lane when on a dual carriageway or motorway.
- Allow suitable clear distance between you and the car in front of you. This will prove its value as we make judgments whether to stop or proceed through stoplights on the route.
- Use your best judgment when approaching a long green or yellow traffic signal. Don't be concerned about delaying those behind you by conservatively judging the light. Judge it as you would if you were travelling independently of a group.
- If a non-group driver wants to cut in, let them. In fact, make it easy for them. There will be plenty of time to regroup on stretches of dual carriageway or at rest stops. Share the road!
- Passing: if we need to pass a car or cars, it should be done "one car at a time". In other words, don't all move out at the same time and pass at once. Pass as an individual, not as a group.
- Use common sense. Drive as though you are an individual following a planned route and map, rather than a participant of a group. Please take a few minutes to review the itinerary before the trip, and locate the roads on your map or atlas.
- Your safety and safe operation of your vehicle is your responsibility alone and the TVRCC and/or run organiser assumes no responsibility for anything other than making the arrangements for the event.
